1 Week Reminder: Morningstar Indexes General Equity Index Consultation Results: Q1 2026

As previously announced, Morningstar Indexes is proceeding with the proposed updates to the treatment of nonmandatory share and float changes to ensure at least two days' advance notice are provided. Some changes will also be made to the treatment of spinoff securities.

Nonmandatory Share and Float Changes

If there are fewer than two trading days between the announcement and effective dates of nonmandatory share and float changes, the effective date will be pushed to provide two trading days' notice. The effective date will also be pushed back one trading day if the security is not trading on the business day before the original effective date. For securities that become suspended after a nonmandatory share change is announced, the share change will be cancelled, and the change will be implemented upon resumption of trading, giving two days' notice from the resumption date.

Spinoff Child Security Retention

Morningstar Indexes will also start to retain spinoffs in broad equity indexes until reviewed at the next reconstitution if they are trading within 40 days of the ex-date (60 days for Indian securities). This treatment will apply to float-adjusted market cap-weighted broad market indexes, including global, country, regional, size, style, sector and industry indexes. However, it will not apply to ESG indexes or strategic beta indexes, including dividend, thematic, factor, moat, or alternatively weighted indexes. Those derived indexes will continue to drop spinoffs after two trading days.

Spinoff Pricing Enhancement

The methodology for determining the entry price for spinoffs will also be updated. If a child entity is trading on a conditional basis on the trading day prior to the spin-off ex-date, it will be added in the index at the when-issued price, instead of a price of 0, with the relative parent price adjustment on ex-date open.

These changes will be effective from July 13, 2026.

About Morningstar Indexes
